

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank all those who have accompanied me over the last two decades in this journey. Without their help, knowledge and friendship I could not have even begun the work of this book.

In particular, my deepest gratitude goes to Benko Gjata and Artin Rrapaj for the constant support offered to me during my research in Albania; to Paola Pizzicori and Giacomo Sferlazzo for welcoming and guiding me during the time I spent in Lampedusa; to Rosina Chiurazzi and all the staff members, local coordinators and intercultural guides of the European network 'Migrantour: Intercultural Urban Routes', and among them particularly to Hassan Khorzom for sharing his inspiring story; to Rachel Radmilli of the University of Malta and all the colleagues and students who participated in the two editions of the summer school 'Mobility and Heritage in the Mediterranean' (MeditHerIty); to the organizers and participants of the summer school 'Cultures, Migrations, Borders' (MigBord) of the University of Aegean, in Lesbos; to Alice Bellagamba, Silvia Barberani, Ivan Bargna, Luca Rimoldi and all the colleagues at the University of Milan Bicocca; to Marco Aime at the University of Genoa, my supervisor during the doctoral programme in 'Migrations and Intercultural Processes'; to Marco Buttino, Carlo Capello and all the colleagues at the University of Turin; to Bruno Riccio and Pietro Cingolani at the University of Bologna; to Dionigi Albera at the IDEMEC (Institute of European Mediterranean and Comparative Ethnology, Aix-Marseille University); to Meghann Ormond at the Wageningen University & Research; to Ferruccio Pastore and Irene Ponzo at FIERI; to the fellow members of the Italian Society of Applied Anthropology (SIAA).

I am also indebted to the colleagues who over the years accepted and discussed my papers within symposia and conferences, and edited the volumes and special issues in which I published the contributions that I then developed into the chapters of this book: Freya Higgins-Desbiolles, Lynda-Ann Blanchard and Yoko Urbain; Natalia Bloch and Kathleen Adams; Pierluigi Musarò and Emanuela Piga Bruni; Panas Karampampas and Jutta Lauth Bacas; Selenia Marabello; Noel Salazar; Paolo Boccagni and Sara Bonfanti.

Many thanks to Joanna Ellul, Rachel Radmilli, Sylvia Glover and Tom Bonnington, Charlotte Mosedale and Caroline Kutzt for the accurate translation, proofreading and editing of the book.

Finally, I would like to sincerely thank Tom Selwyn for generously accepting my book in the series he directs. It is truly an honour to be able to offer the fruit of my work to readers in such a prestigious frame.

This book is dedicated to the memory of Kozeta Nota and Nino Taranto, my dear friends in Tirana and Lampedusa, who passed away too early.
